ATLANTA (CBS46) - Time for Chicken and Beer before boarding.

There's a new restaurant to check out the next time you fly in and out of Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport. Rapper and actor Chris 'Ludacris' Bridges held a grand opening Monday afternoon for his new spot, Chicken + Beer.

The restaurant, which is named after his third studio album, is located at Concourse D and can seat 90 people. Customers can enjoy Southern-style comfort food and locally-sourced beers.

"I think what's good is that Luda's Chicken and Pecan Waffles with the whiskey syrup is probably going to be the most popular on the menu and that apple dessert...out of control," said Ludacris.

The rapper, who calls Atlanta home, said the restaurant has been 10 years in the making and the location was also key in the process.

"Because this is the busiest airport in the world, for me to say that, I can't even believe it myself. But, it's great that it's on Concourse D because you have people that are flying out of Concourse D, but it's becoming a destination restaurant where people from all concourses want to come and check out Ludacris' Chicken and Beer."

Ludacris partnered with executives from Jackmont Hospitality Inc. to open Chicken + Beer. This is Jackmont Hospitality Inc.'s second independently developed concept at Hartsfield-Jackson following One Flew South.
